Four of the prestigious Royal Northern College of Music's most accomplished students will be performing a programme of autumnal music at The Octagon, Grassington on SATURDAY 13th OCTOBER starting at 7.30pm.

The Freeman String Quartet features: Xander Croft (violin), Katherine Stoneham (violin), Chance Freeman (viola) and Felix Hughes (cello).

Appearing by kind permission of RNCM, The Freeman Quartet is made up of four undergraduate students and was formed in October 2017. They have gone on to perform in numerous competitions and concerts during their first year at the RNCM. In January 2018, they were winners of the annual Nossek Prize playing Mendelssohn's quartet in E flat major, Op 12. As a result, the quartet performed at the prestigious RNCM Chamber Music Festival in March 2018, with a programme including Phillip Glass' 2nd quartet 'Company'. The Freeman have continued to be performed with great acclaim at private events in and around Manchester.
